WASHINGTON WHISPERINGS. An exceedingly delicate question of construction has been presented to the Treasury Department by the World's Columbian Commission. When foreign Governments were formally invited by the President to participate in the position, no exception was of course made in the case of China, and in anticipation of the acceptance of the invitation by that Government, the Commissioner inquires whether citizens of China, who may come to this country for the purpose of visiting the fair, will be declared to be free from landing under the Exclusion act.....Secretary Foster's plans for continuing the 4 1-2 per cents, at 2 per cent, have met with the favor expected from the banks and the private holders of the bonds.....The superintendent of immigration has decided that three so-called "Harvesters" residing in Winnipeg, Man., who recently immigrated to the United States at Pembina, N. Whether or not the officers of the Alliance had a knowledge of a speculative purpose, it is evident that they are quite disposed to rejoice at the publication of the circular and to claim that it will benefit their order.....A Maine man is now at the head of the Department of Justice. Assistant Attorney General Cotton has been designated by the President to act as Attorney General in the absence of Mr. Miller and Judge Taft. The former will be gone for fully a month.....The New York Herald's Washington correspondent telegraphs the following: I have the authority of Mr. William L. He returned to Boston Friday....Mrs. Sarah York of Hermon is in town visiting relatives....Mr. Miles Pease and Mr. George W. Morse and wife are occupying their cottage at Temple Heights.

Concerning Investments.

There never seems to be any lack of money to put into wild cat schemes, while honest investments often go a begging. Repeated warnings appear of no avail, or if once heeded are soon forgotten. The western boomer, the green goods sharper, the woman's bank swindlers, continue to reap their harvests, while legitimate business openings are neglected and home industries are allowed to languish. Just now the so-called endowment orders are attracting attention, and some figures from the report of the Insurance Commissioner of Massachusetts touching the operations of the various endowment orders in that State will be of interest: In the aggregate, during the six months between Jan. 1, and July 1 of the present year, these 55 companies took in a little more than $5,000,000. What have the certificate holders realized during this time? A little more than $2,000,000 has been disbursed in the payment of certificates, and a little less than $500,000 in sick benefits, while exactly $1,145,538 has been swallowed up in "expenses" by the gentlemen who run the companies. Meanwhile, the liabilities, in the form of certificates written, have increased $81,500,000 during the six months; and the total which the certificate holders have to meet with their assessments, in addition to the copious sums certain to be absorbed in "expenses," reaches the enormous sum of $81,810,278. There are at present 265,485 certificate holders to stand under this burden.

Two of these concerns which have recently been prominently before the public in connection with the complaints of dissatisfied and apprehensive certificate holders are the Golden Grail and the Royal Ark. The Royal Ark has not at present a dollar on deposit with the State Treasurer. It had $198,614 balance in its benefit fund last December; it has now, at the date of this report, only $10,248. It has called 21 assessments since Jan. 1. But it has matured and unpaid certificates already to the amount of $207,000, and besides this, it has certificates outstanding, all of which fall due within a year and most of them within six months, to the amount of $670,000. With these figures before them, the participants in this particular scheme for getting rich in a hurry can form some estimate as to what their certificates are likely to cost, and just how profitable the "investment" is likely to be. The Golden Grail reported $67,321 in its benefit fund toward the payment of $232,100 of certificates already matured but unpaid. Its outstanding certificates, all to mature within a year, and one-third within six months, amount to $1,520,557. The "expense" of this valuable and philanthropic business for the six months amounted to $125,261. Then there is the Friendly Aid Society, which has $237,775 of certificates matured but unpaid, and $862,050 to fall due within the next six months. Twenty-eight assessments have already been called and there are only $100,661 in hand toward obligations amounting to $900,825. There is nothing very extraordinary in this outlook, but for administering this business the managers absorbed $83,555 in "expenses" during the six months. These are but specimen figures of the kind of which the report is full. Altogether, it is a melancholy picture which the report affords of unscrupulous avarice on the one side and of pitiful credulity on the other.

In contrast with the figures above given of the endowment orders of Massachusetts may be cited the returns of the building societies of any State or city where these beneficient institutions have been put in operation. The latest official returns of the New Jersey building societies show that there are now 254 of them, with 71,726 members, of whom nearly one-fourth are women. These societies have issued 437,778 shares, and have assets amounting to $22,100,000, or more than $50 per share. A great deal of money is paid out every year on account of withdrawing or matured shares, but the annual income reaches nearly $10,000,000. The average yearly expense account of the societies is $834 each. These building societies, as the Boston Journal well says, "make genuine investments. They assist in building up communities with neat dwellings. They help their members to the ownership of homes, and the members who borrow, in common with those who do not, share the profit of the transactions. It strikes us that this is a good deal better than playing a blind game with the originators and managers of irresponsible schemes, who have the whole course of the game in their own hands, and can at any moment compel the other participants to forfeit every dollar they have put in. Thousands of deluded certificate holders in the get-rich-easy companies, who are now clamoring for their long overdue certificates, will, we are confident, agree with us in this view. And then there are the savings banks in which one may deposit one's money, with a reasonable assurance of being able to get it again, with interest, when wanted." The Belfast Loan and Building Association has been successfully established, but the advantages it offers both to the investor and borrower should be more largely availed of.

The yacht Una as she now lies on the Belfast marine railway presents an interesting study. Built in 1847, by the foremost yacht designer of that day, George Steers, who modeled the yacht America and other equally speedy but less famous pleasure craft, one naturally is led to contrast her lines with those of the later creations of Burgess and Herreshoff. The difference are not so great as might be expected, indeed, with greater depth of keel and more drag, and with more overhang both forward and aft, the Una would pass for a modern yacht. In the water the want of the long overhang aft characteristic of the racers of today is the only noticeable peculiarity. She has a somewhat hollow bow, and our present designers have discarded hollow lines, and she has inside instead of outside lead ballast. The placing of the ballast on the keel has perhaps as much to do with the speed and stability of the modern yacht as the slight modifications of model; and thus ballasted, and in her original racing rig as a sloop, we are confident that the Una would give a good account of herself. Her present owner does not, however, care for racing, is not a member of any yacht club, and simply cruises for the pleasure of himself and friends. All regret the accident which brought the Una to our port for repairs, and hope that for many seasons to come she may cruise in these waters.

Congressman Milliken has received a letter from the republican State Executive Committee of Ohio, urging him to speak in the campaign in that State. Mr. Milliken has travelled more than thirty thousand miles speaking for his party, and has made more speeches upon the stump than any man in Maine except Mr. Blaine. Perhaps he might think he had done quite six share of this work, but as he is a warm personal friend of Major McKinley, the Republican candidate for Governor of Ohio, and feels a great interest in his success, he will probably lend him a hand in his campaign.

Hon. T. B. Reed made a notable speech Friday at a reception tendered him by the Portland Club. Mr. Reed was introduced by Hon. H. B. Cleaves, president of the club, and was received with great enthusiasm. He spoke as follows:

"While we surpass other nations in extent of territory, in wondrous scenery and enterprise, we are not to-day so far ahead of them as we used to be in devotion to human liberty. Everywhere in the world the love of liberty has increased; everywhere in the world the standard has been lifted higher and higher until, in the most of Europe, it reaches a point almost equal to our own.

"In recognition of manhood as such, we were the pioneer nation; we were the people who first determined that there was safety in the rule of the people. And yet, we ourselves were very much afraid of the results. It was a new experiment, when, 100 years ago our ancestors began to entrust all the people of the country with the power; there was great fear lest disaster should come to the nation on account of it. Our Constitution is full of those fears. It is made with checks and balances, in order to restrain the people. These restraints in the Constitution were sufficient; they were all that any nation needed, but in addition to this, during our history while we were under the control of the South and those who sympathized with them, there gradually grew up other checks and other oppositions to the will of the people, until to-day the country does not occupy the advanced position that it formerly did with reference to other nations.

Northport's boom continues. The close of Campmeeting did not produce an exodus; and the arrivals continue to equal if they do not exceed the departures.

The Herreshoff yacht Gloriana has won her eighth consecutive race. Glory, Gloriana.

The Proposed Regatta and a Yacht Club.

The article in another column from the Bangor Daily News advocating a regatta in Penobscot Bay, and the organization of a yacht club, will interest many of our people, and especially those who own a boat or enjoy sailing. The Journal has made several efforts in this direction, but we regret to say without practical result. We hope our Bangor contemporary may be more successful, and shall cheerfully lend it a hand in the undertaking. Failing to rouse sufficient interest to bring about a regatta the Journal latterly turned its attention to pointing out the beauties and advantages of our bay as a cruising ground for foreign yachts, and has made a feature of noticing the arrival and departure of such craft. So far as Belfast is concerned it must provide a suitable landing if this is to became a port of call for pleasure craft, and for other and business reasons a boat landing should be provided. There is no place where small sailing craft or row boats can land except at high water. When Dr. Grindle came over from Castine in his naphtha launch, as he did frequently last season, he was compelled to go nearly to the bridge and use the private boat landing of Mr. Holt. People come from Islesboro, and Islands farther down the bay, to trade in Belfast and are put to great inconvenience from the lack of facilities for landing passengers or taking them and their packages on board.

Let us have the regatta this season, as proposed by our Bangor contemporary—and no more favorable opportunity could be had for organizing the Penobscot Bay Yacht Club—and then let our people set to work to provide for a suitable boat landing for next season. The Winthrop Yacht Club will probably make this their headquarters on their next annual cruise, and we may confidently expect visits from other yachtmen, as the merits of our bay as a cruising ground become more fully known.

President Harrison arrived at Bennington, Vt., Tuesday evening. He was cheered en route and addressed the people at New Albany and other places.

New Schooner Eliza J. Pendleton.

The three masted sch. Eliza J. Pendleton will launch from the yard of Carter & Co. to-day at high water. The schooner is one of the best ever turned out from this yard, which is praise enough for any vessel. Her dimensions, are 157 feet on the keel, 150 feet over all, 36 feet beam and 18½ feet deep. She is a double-decked vessel and will measure about 725 tons government register. Her frame is hard wood and hackmetack, and the planking and ceiling are southern hard pine. The schooner is built on the model of the sch. Georgia Gilkey, recently built at Scarsport, but is seven feet longer than that vessel. The Pendleton has a handsome bow, considerable overhang both forward and aft, graceful lines, and is an excellent specimen of marine architecture and workmanship. She is better finished than the majority of vessels, the outside being as smooth as a yacht. The lower deck is not built with the shear of the vessel, but is level. This gives nine feet between decks forward, tapering to about six aft. This will allow cargo to be taken in between decks or in the lower hold by one set of ports, or a stick of timber fifty feet long can be taken out of the forward hatch. A fly rail runs the entire length of the vessel. Her lower masts are handsome Oregon pines, 66 feet long. The topmasts are 30 feet each; spanker boom 70 feet, fore and main boom 45 feet each, and gaffs 44 feet each. The bowsprit is 27 feet outboard, and the jibboom is 65 feet. These dimensions will give a fair spread of canvas. Her standing rigging is wire. The Pendleton has steam, but the engine house is very small, the owners not caring to cut away forward beams for the sake of a large engine house. The engine is about fifteen horse power and with the boiler came from the Bath Iron Works. The patent windlass is from Knowlton's factory at Camden, and the anchors from Alden's, same town. She has two Edison pumps, but no wrecking pump. The after house is 25 by 26 feet. The after cabin is 8½ by 12½ feet, and the forward cabin the same dimensions. The captain's room is 6 by 12½, the pantry 6 by 6, the mate's room the same. There are two spare rooms. The cabin is finished in ash, and while not elaborate is neat and tasteful. The midship house is 12 by 16 feet and contains the galley and forecastle for the sailors. The schooner is built for business and everything about her is strong. Papers will be taken out in the name of Capt. Fields C. Pendleton, but doubtless some other person will command her. She is owned by the Pendleton Bros., of Islesboro, and is named for their venerable mother.

While the builders are Carter & Co. Mr. E. S. Carter had general superintendence of the work. The joiners were Mayo & Dodge; Thomas Smalley, calker; Geo. E. Wight, troner; W. E. Triggs, fastener; Mr. Gardner, of Castine, rigger, and H. H. Carter, Jr., painter.

Her top is painted a cream color with two red bands. The schooner is a credit to her builders and will compare favorably with the vessels now doing business on our coast.

Echoes from the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows.

The sessions of the Grand Bodies of Odd Fellows held at Portland last week were the largest and most interesting for years. Three appeal cases occupied one afternoon, and brought out some able discussion.

The date of the annual meeting was changed from the second Tuesday in August to the third Tuesday in October, making the coming Grand Lodge year fourteen months. The next session will be held at Augusta in the hall of Asylum Lodge.

Mr. Samuel Adams, of Belfast, was reappointed Grand Marshal, the first time in the history of Maine Odd Fellowship when the Grand Marshal succeeded himself. It has been almost the universal custom for the Grand Master to select his marshal from his own lodge, and it is a great compliment to Mr. Adams to be again selected.

The election of Hon. Reuel Robinson, of Camden, as Grand Warden is pleasing to eastern Odd Fellows, particularly to Waldo Lodge, Belfast, Mt. Battle Lodge, of which Mr. Robinson is a member, is an off-shoot from Waldo. Mr. R. is an able man, a genial gentleman, a thorough Odd Fellow, and will honor the position of Grand Master when he reaches that chair two years hence.

The following deputies were appointed from Belfast: N. G. Pettengill over the lodges at Belfast, Unity, Searsport and Castine; W. M. Thayer over the Encampment at Belfast, and Mrs. Hannah Dyer over the Rebekah Lodge in this city.

Grand Patriarch William H. Austin, of North Berwick, made the following report in regard to the Encampment branch:

Number of encampments, last report	48
Number of members, last report	4912
Number of encampments, present time	49
Present membership	4999
Gain in membership	87

From the report of B. C. Stone, Grand Scribe, the following statistics are taken for the year ending Dec. 31st:

Number of Patriarchs relieved	400
Number of weeks for which benefits were paid	4228
Amount paid for relief of Patriarchs	$13,535 60
Amount paid for burying the dead	664 50
Total amount of relief	$14,200 10
Current expenses separate from benefits and charities	8,166 54
Amount of receipts	18,016 51
Invested funds	66,961 36
Real estate and hall property, not including paraphernalia	1,587 50

The following officers of the Grand Encampment were elected:

Grand Patriarch—William E. Plummer, Portland.
Grand High Priest—George E. Kenworthy, Jr., Portland.
Grand Senior Warden—Ernest T. Lee, Calais.
Grand Scribe—Benjamin C. Stone, Portland.
Grand Treasurer—Albro E. Chase, Portland.
Grand Junior Warden—David M. Park, Pittsfield.
Grand Representative—Wm. H. Austin, North Berwick.

The Cruise of the Everett.

Capt. N. F. Houston or Thursday last sailed in his schooner yacht Everett, accompanied by Messrs. John H. Quimby, William F. Bean, Alfred Johnson and Harry Rice, for a cruise down the bay. The first night the schooner anchored off Butler Island. The next day they tried the fish below Saddleback, and met with fair success. The president and cashier of the Belfast Savings Bank hooked a cod fish at about the same time, and it was a race as to who would land the fish first. Mr. Quimby blistered his fingers, but Mr. Houston got his fish over the rail first. Mr. Quimby's, however, was much the larger, which compensated him. They report a large fleet of mackerel fishermen in the bay, and the Everett cruised among them. A call was made at the Point Lookout Club house, Isle au Haut where the party was handsomely entertained. Mr. Albert B. Otis of Belfast, a member of the club was present and made it pleasant for his Belfast neighbors. Dinner was served at the club house. Saturday the party started for home and came through North Haven thoroughfare. Mr. Quimby, who has cruised somewhat about Penobscot Bay, says that the Thoroughfare is superior to Eggemoggin Reach, and is one of the prettiest parts of our down east bay. The party was delighted with the trip, and Mr. Quimby presents blistered hands and nose as evidence of the good time.

Fish and Fishing.

Reports from Gay Head state that mackerel struck in off that place for the first time this season Thursday and that mackerel boats are making good catches.

Friday was the greatest day of the season, and for that matter for the last decade, for mackerel in the vicinity of Rockland. It is estimated that 300 barrels were taken by small boats between Rockland and Rockport, the short distance of 6 miles. While on the far horizon, outside from Matinicus to Hurricane, a white winged fleet of larger craft, estimated at 150 sail, could be seen at Crescent Beach, from early dawn till dusk, busy with the shining fellows. The catch must have been enormous.

Five Hours from Northport to Turtle Head.

The Marjorie's last trip ended to the tune of "A wet sheet and a flowing sea," and our nautical Local, who has thus far kept the log book, fairly revelled over the record of favoring winds and speedy passages. The boat has demonstrated her ability to get there, let the wind blow from whatever quarter it may; but a flat calm leaves the yachtsman at the mercy of the tides and tries his patience sorely. One morning recently Dr. Lombard suggested a run over to Turtle Head for a neighborly call on Dr. A. S. Davis and his guests, and it was thought that Mr. Harris, owner of the yacht Una, might take passage on the return trip. The first difficulty encountered was in getting the anchor, which had been dropped under foot during a storm as a matter of precaution. The "mud-hook" only weighs forty pounds, but it defied the efforts of the crew to raise it. Finally sail was made and a favoring breeze coming the anchor was "sail-d out." This is pretty good proof as to the holding ground off the North Shore. The bottom is a hard clay and an anchor holds in it as though bedded in cement. With anchor cutted the Marjorie was headed across the bay. The party consisted of her owner, the Doctor, Miss Marjorie Pilsbury and Master Ralph Lombard. The wind, light at first, soon died out entirely, until the whole expanse of water was like a mirror. Looking down the western entrance of the bay not a sign of wind could be seen. Fortunately the tide was in our favor, and at times a little zephyr from the southwest would awaken hopes of a favoring breeze. The small boat was sent out ahead, and the yacht towed for a mile or more. It was not until we were fairly under the Head and about to let the anchor go that the long hoped for wind came. We were not provisioned for a long trip but fortunately had on board a jug of Oyster Pond water, procured at Camden on a recent visit there. The little ones bore their long fast very well, but when the Doctor reminded them that in going yachting one must be prepared to put up with whatever is encountered, the little girl replied: "But, Doctor, they have something on board to eat don't they?"

When landed our troubles were soon over. As is well known Dr. Davis maintains a life-saving station at his Island Home, and in the twinkling of an eye the Marjorie's crew were seated before a clam chowder and lobster salad, and they did ample justice to the appetizing viands. The Doctor's guests include Miss Shillaber, a lady and gentleman and another lady whose names escaped us, Mr. Harris of yacht Una, Hon. Wakefield W. Frye and Mr. Harry Frye—a most genial company. With appetites satisfied and cigars alight the whole party were comfortably seated on the veranda when the white sails of two yachts seen through the evergreens which crown the Head sent most of the party hurrying down to the rocky point where stands the flag staff, to see the craft pass. The first was a good sized sloop yacht, a stranger in these waters, and the other was the well known sloop Daphne of Castine. Dr. Davis gave the stranger a salute from his little brass cannon, and she responded by dipping her colors. As he reloaded the piece the Doctor remarked: "I have been loading and firing that gun for fourteen years." May he live to salute the passing craft for many years to come is the wish of the many hundreds who have enjoyed the hospitalities of Island Home.

Fears that the wind might go down with the sun caused us to hurry our departure, but the leave taking was pleasantly prolonged by Miss Shillaber and the Messrs. Frye boarding the Marjorie for a short sail, taking a boat in tow for the row home. There was a nice little breeze from the southwest and the setting sun having gone behind the clouds made it very pleasant for sailing. So the Marjorie sailed away homeward for a mile or more and then made a tack inshore to take the boat party to windward of their destination and make their return shorter and easier. Too soon to part with such pleasant company the yacht was laid to, the boat brought alongside, and then with final good byes and good nights we parted company. The run home by moonlight was delightful, and in striking contrast with the trip over. F.

Maine's Great Hunter a Game Warden.

A Journal representative interviewed Mr. C. B. Hazeltine concerning his recent visit to Mr. Jack Darling, the famous hunter of Maine. Mr. Hazeltine was accompanied by Game Commissioner Stanley and William B. Bacon, Esq., of Boston. The object of the visit was to enlist the services of Mr. Darling on the side of game protection, and in this they were successful.

Mr. Hazeltine said that Darling's camp is beautifully situated on Lake Nicatous in the heart of the deer country. He reports deer plentiful and fishing good. Trout and white perch are abundant in Nicatous. Horse shoe, Green and West Lakes are within easy carry from Darling's camp, and all are excellent fishing and hunting places. Mr. Darling has had the reputation of dogging deer, and has advocated it in some vigorous articles over his own signature in Forest and Stream, but will now be appointed a game warden. Mr. Darling is one of the best hunters of Maine and the gentlemen named are desirous of assisting him in the prosecution of the law. Mr. Darling believes he can better serve himself and the State by enforcing the law and preserving the game. Hunting parties are requested to visit Mr. Darling's camp in season, where they will find excellent quarters, good fare and beds, at $1 per day. Guides and canoes will be furnished at reasonable rates. Darling's camp is reached in a nine hour's easy journey from Olamon.

The State and the gentlemen interested are to be congratulated on obtaining the valuable services of this noted hunter, and it is hoped they will be of advantage to all interested.

Cooking School Notes.

The Demonstration Lecture advertised for the 13th inst. will be given this (Thursday) afternoon. The program is an interesting one and the managers hope to see a goodly number present.

On Saturday evening, the 22nd inst., Miss Farmer will give a Demonstration Lecture upon candy making. This will be an interesting occasion for the young people, and possibly the only opportunity they will have to observe Miss Farmer's methods. Admission 25 cts. which includes "sampling" the candy.

It is very important that the managers should know definitely just the number who intend to join the classes, now forming for a second term, in the Belfast Cooking school. This is especially necessary from the fact that Miss Farmer has been asked to take classes in Searsport, and unless those who expect to join the Belfast classes during the term, secure their places very soon, they may not be able to do so at all. Tickets for the course may be had of Mrs. Burrington, Cedar street. Terms $3.00 for the course of 12 lessons. Single lessons in classes will be 50 cts.

All persons, not already assigned to classes in the cooking school, are requested to report in person or by proxy at the Memorial Building Friday morning the 21st inst. at 9 o'clock.

An interesting feature of the next term, will be a limited number of lessons in sick room cookery. Any who especially desire to take these lessons are requested to make it known to Miss Farmer at an early day, or before her time is fully engaged with other classes.

Wills Filed.

The following is an abstract of the wills filed at the August term of the Probate Court in Belfast:

Mrs. Ann F. Johnson, late of Belfast, gives to her daughter, Mary F. Johnson, for and during her natural life, the use and income of all her property of whatsoever nature. Upon the decease of her daughter Mary, without issue, the balance of the estate to be divided among her other three children—Arbella Hersey, Horatio H. and Charles E. Johnson. There are certain other conditions regarding the children, if any, of the above named parties. Mary F. Johnson and Edward Johnson are named as executors of the will.

Adelbert James Hichborn, late of Stockton, gives to his father and mother, Robert and Susan Jane Hichborn, the old homestead, known as the Robert Hichborn place to be used by them during their lives. At their death the estate to be divided equally among his brothers and sisters—Geo. W., Edmund L., Emma and Nellie Hichborn. To his wife Mary E. Hichborn, he gives the remainder of his property of whatever nature. The said Mary E. Hichborn to pay to Robert Hichborn the sum of $100 per year, during his life, and at his death the same to be paid to his wife, Susan Jane Hichborn. At the death of Mary E. Hichborn the interest of her legacy to be given to Robert Hichborn, if living; if not living, to be given to Susan Jane Hichborn; at the death of both to be divided equally among Geo. W., Edmund L., Emma and Nellie Hichborn.

A Move Against Bangor Rumsellers.

A dispatch from Bangor says that J. W. Mitchell of Rockland, secretary of the Maine Prohibitory League, is canvassing that city to learn the opinions of the people in regard to measures for a better enforcement of the liquor law, also that if he finds the backing sufficient he will form a law and order league there. Mr. Mitchell is known to be an earnest and vigorous worker and a good deal of credit is placed in the report that he says, "If we do begin operations here we will make some of the liquor dealers tired, as we will not stop until our work is completed if it requires one, two or five years to accomplish it. We do not come here to create an excitement, but for business."

Northport Camp Ground and Vicinity.

Abundance of broiler mackerel are still brought in almost every morning.

There was a social hop among the guests at Northport Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Shaw have returned to Belfast after a sojourn at their South Shore cottage.

The names registered at the hotel last Thursday numbered 129, Friday's arrivals were 95, Saturday 34, Sunday 35.

The outstanding debt of the Camp Ground association is reported to amount to $3,669, in five several notes at 6 per cent. interest.

Miss Ella A. Wentworth, of Belfast, and Miss Annie S. Crown, of Chelsea, Mass., are stopping at the Maynard cottage, Park Row, for a week.

The store on the grounds has done a rushing business this season. It has accommodated the public and been a good thing for the proprietors.

The yacht Norseman, with Messrs. Fred Miller, Fred Wyman, Samuel Woodbury and Charles E. Sweet, of Brewer, on board, was anchored off the grounds on Thursday.

There were quite a number of yachts here last week, and at one time half a dozen or more were anchored below the wharf. The sch. Qui Vive brought up a party from Vinalhaven.

Most of the cottagers still remain, and all vacancies are being filled by parties who want to stop a month or less later. The hotel is still doing a good business, with new arrivals every day.

Two hundred tickets were sold for the dance at the rink on South Shore Thursday night, and as there were about four girls to one fellow, it may be imagined what a nice time they must have had.

Policemen flashed a lantern on the verandas of a house on Main street one dark night last week and discovered the inmates calmly cuddled up in pairs in imitation of the souvenir spoons. "Requiescent in pace."

The Armada Reform Club, of Bangor, landed here Thursday on their first annual excursion. Over 150 enjoyed the sail down the river. All voted they had an elegant time and their next excursion would be to Northport.

The largest crowd brought in by steamboat at one time came on the Katahdin, Thursday morning, when she landed 325 passengers here on her inward trip. The same boat carried off about 200 of them Friday afternoon.

Arrangements will be made next year for a Chautauqua assembly on the Camp Ground shortly before or after the campmeeting. A committee has been appointed to arrange the matter, and it will of course be a veritable attraction.

Beans were in such demand here last week that Brown's big iron pot went off and was plunged into the sea. Fortunately the hole in the ground remained. Jones, of Belfast, came to the rescue, but nevertheless hundreds went without beans Sunday morning.

Mr. Charles Dickey furnished 113 quarts of milk on each of the two days of the rush, Thursday and Friday, to the Northport hotel. A good share of this was raided for in advance far out in the country. In addition to this Mr. D. supplies many customers in the cottages.

F. E. Boothby, general passenger and ticket agent M. C. R. R., and wife, with Mrs. V. B. Smith, Mrs. B's mother, and Mrs. A. L. Smith and Miss Blanche Smith, of Waterville, registered at the hotel last Friday, where they dined, and after wards visited their parents at the cottage.

Of 340 guests arriving at the hotel from Thursday to Sunday inclusive, 32 were from Boston, many of the others from Bangor and towns on the bay. G. B. Congdon with wife and family were here from Georgetown, S. C., F. D. Brown from Chicago and F. E. Wentworth from California.

Mrs. Frank Scales, of California, Mrs. John E. Henshaw and daughters Blanche and Julia, of Newton Center, Mass., and Miss Sallie A. Lord, of Lowell, Mass., are enjoying an outing here with Mrs. George S. Mowe and Inez Mowe at their cottage on Main St. Mrs. Scales is a sister of Mrs. Mowe.

Monday was a beautiful evening, and the moonlight and smooth water tempted many to a row on the bay. A large bonfire on the beach above the wharf, and a display of fire works, including fire balloons, contributed to the beauty and interest of the scene. It was an evening of general enjoyment.

Caleb's Courtship.

AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

I hadn't no time for courtin' when I was young an' spry,
For what with workin' an' savin,' I let the years go by;
Then I was buyin' an' buildin',—an' farm work never gits done,—
Till at last I counted my birthdays, and found I was fifty one.
"High time," sez I, "to be choosin' a suitable partner for life."
So I jest sot down an' considered where I'd better look for a wife.
I wanted her young an' harnsome—of course—an' stiddy an' neat,
Smart at bakin' an' churchin,' quick with her hands an' feet,
But slow with her tongue (for talkin' jest wastes a woman's time),
An' as savin' with every penny as ef 'twas a silver dime;
An' ef she was good at mendin' an' scrubbin' an' cleanin' house,
I made up my mind to take her, ef she was poor as a mouse.
Waal, it cost some time an' trouble to diskivir a gal to my minds,
There was lots on 'em to choose from, but the best was hard to find.
At last, after lookin' and thinkin', I settled on Eunice Stout,
The deacon's youngest darter—nineteen or there about.
Pretty—yes, as a pieter; made the best butter, too. That ever was sent to market. Sez I, "I guess she'll do.
Whenever I've stopped to the deacon's she's as busy as a bee—
Allus a-workin' an' doin'—yes' that's the wife for me."
But how that I'd done my choosin', I sez to myself, "What next?"
I didn't know much 'bout wimmen, an' I'll own I was some perplexed;
So I asked advice of a neighbor—that was the biggest mistake—
Things mighth't hev gone so crooked ef I'd never said nothin' to Jake;
But he was twenty year younger, an' the gals all liked him, ye see,
So I asked his advice about Eunice—jest like a fool, as he be.
Sez he, "Why, man, it's as easy! You must take her out to ride;
You must bring her home from meetin', an' stick close to her beside;
You must go to see her of evenin's; you must buy her some pretty things—
A book or a breastpin, mebbe, some ribbons, or some rings;
Then tell her her cheeks is rosy, tell her her eyes is bright;
Tell her you love her dearly, an' dream of her at night;
Tell her—" But here I stopped him. "It's easy talkin'," sez I;
"But I never did no courtin', an' I'm half afeard to try.
I'll make ye an offer, Jacob: ef you'll go with me to-night,
Kinder keep up my courage, an' see that things goes right,
Tackle the deacon, mebbe, an' show me how to be skim,
I'll give ye a yearlin' calf—I will, as sure as sin is sin."
Well, the bargain was struck. Me an' Jacob went to see Eunice together.
Jake, he talked to the deacon 'bout crops an' cattle an' weather,
Eunice, she kep' very quiet—jest sot an' knitted away.
An' I sot close beside her, a-thinkin' of somethin' to say.
Many a evenin' I noticed, when she went for apples and cake
Into the pantry, 'twas allus, "Come hold the candle, Jake;"
As if she counted him nobody; then she'd give me a smile,
Soon's I offered to help her, an' say 'twarn't worth my while.
I'll own 'twas quite surprisin' how long they'd hev her stay
A-pickin' out them apples, but Jacob told me one day
They was trym' to find the best ones, so's she could give 'em to me.
An' surely that was platterin', as any one could see!
Once I bought her a ribbin—Jake said it oughter be blue,
But a bow-knot in one's far more lastin', an' this one was cheaper, too.
An' once I took her a ribbin, but that wasted half a day,
An' I made up my mind that walkin' was pleasanter anyway.
Waal, I'd seen six months a-courtin', when I sez to Jake, sez I
"It's time that we was married, here's Thanksgivin' day comin' nigh—
A first-rate day for a weddin', an' besides, to say the least,
I can make that Thanksgivin' turkey do for part of the weddin' feast."
So that night I screwed up my courage to the very stickin' point
You wouldn't never mistrusted that I shook in every joint—
We was comin' along from meetin', sez I, "I'll like ye to say
That you'll have no objections, Eunice, to be married Thanksgivin' Day."
She turned an' looked at me, smilin' an' blushin', an' jest as sweet
As skursen knew for a minnit ef I stood on my head or my feet;
Then—"I hev n't the least o' notion," sez she, as I opened the gate;
But she didn't ask me to stop—she sez only, "It's rather late."
I looked all round for Jacob, but he'd kinder slipped out of sight,
So I figured the cost of a weddin' as I went along home that night.
Waal, I got my house all ready, an' spoke to the parson beside,
An' arth Thanksgivin' mornin' I started to hev the knot tied.
But before I come to the deacon's—I was walkin' along quite sory,
All rigged in my Sunday best, of course—a sleigh come dashin' by;
Thar was that Jacob a-drivin', an' Eunice sot at his side.
An' he stops an' sez, "Allow me to interduce my bride."
So that was the end of my courtship. You see, I started wrong,
Askin' advice of Jacob, an' takin' him along;
For a team may be better for ploughin' and haylin' an' all the rest,
But when it comes to courtin'—why, a single hoss is best!

In Pot Closet.

Sing heigh, sing ho, for me, an inconvenient thing
A little dingy hole, a hiding underneath the sink,
Where you put the pots and kettles, and the things of laser metals,
With the baking pans and kitchen ware and all the wares that clink.
Stoop! Stoop! Stoop with care!
Mind the nails on the door, if you don't you'll catch your hair.
You'll break your backs a-reaching, ladies, twenty times a day,
If you don't stoop with care when you put your things away.
Old Nick, it was himself. Oh, he invented me
To bother all the women and to punish them as he
By making a receptacle where a wondrous specimen
May, at any time, be found in the pit of—shed.
Stoop! Stoop! Stoop with care!
Mind the nails on the door, if you don't you'll catch your hair.
You'll break your backs a-reaching, ladies, twenty times a day,
If you don't stoop with care when you put your things away.
Sing heigh, sing ho, the crowd of things! just let me tell them o'er,
That everyday, oh ladies, dear! must be o'erhauled by you;
The saucepan see, the toaster, with the griddle and the roaster,
See the stove, the door, the sink brush. See the spider and the ladler, the stove polish, the knife board and the scourer, with its Bristol brick and sand. See the farina kettle and the steamer, the porcelain kettle and the dish-pan, the kerosene can, the teakettle, to say nothing of the sink and stove and dishcloth a hanging on the door.
Stoop! Stoop! Stoop with care!
Mind the nails on the door, if you don't you'll catch your hair.
You'll break your backs a-reaching, ladies, twenty times a day,
If you don't stoop with care when you put your things away.

The Lover's Knot and Others.

"This is a true lover's knot," he said,
And carefully drawing the ends out straight,
Created the form of the figure eight.
"It is, my darling, a double noose,
Pretty to look at if left quite loose,
But two hearts closely we may unite
By pulling the ends of the cord up tight.
"This is a boxline knot," quoth he,
To the merry maiden upon his knee;
"And terrible things on the mighty ship,
Would happen, you know if this knot should slip
In dropping the anchor, in hoisting sail,
In making safe from the fearful gale
And the bowline knot you will understand
Should never be made by a careless hand.
"And this is a weaver's knot, my dear;
An intricate puzzle to you, I fear:
But you'll find you'll often have use for it
When the children's stockings you learn to knit.
O, what confusion and loss beside,
If a knot in the warp were left untied!
Hither and yon would the stitches run,
And the weaver's weaving be soon undone.
"In tying a knot, if you tie it wrong
You can't depend on it very long—
But if made as it ought to be—firm and fast—
'Twill hold, and tighten, and always last.
Now which of these knots do you like the best?"
Said he—and the maiden whom he addressed
Like a woman answered, and queried, too,
"I like the true-lover's knot. Don't you?"

The Beam Trawl.

Capt. Alfred Bradford, an Englishman by birth, who has had considerable experience in fishing as carried on by English fishermen, last spring imported from England a beam trawl, and, with schooner Mary F. Chisholm of Gloucester, made an experimental trip to Georges Bank last spring, where an abundance of fish was found, including the real English sole and plaice, fish of a most delicate flavor and unknown to our markets. He found the sea bottom smooth and admirably adapted to beam trawling, but his work was greatly impeded by the primitive method of operating the gear, which was by a tackle, thus allowing a large portion of the fish to escape before they could be landed, the hoisting process requiring from six to seven hours. Satisfied, however, that if steam were used, as in England, beam trawling would prove a success, Captain Bradford ordered a 100-ton schooner built at Essex, and has procured from England a full set of fishing gear and steam engine, such as are used by beam trawlers there. The vessel will be at once fitted up and it is claimed that by the improved appliances the trawl can be raised from the bottom of the sea in half an hour. Several experienced beam trawlers returned to this country with Capt. Bradford, and will accompany him on his next trip. The report of Capt. Bradford's trip on the Mary F. Chisholm brought inquiries from many parties, some of whom are inclined to throw discredit upon many of his flattering statements, but the captain is confident that the beam trawl will work a miracle in the fisheries, and will be an important factor in the settlement of the bait question.

Gen. R. G. Dyrenforth, who is trying to produce rain by bombarding the heavens from balloons, studied for four years in the military schools of Prussia, just before the outbreak of the American civil war. He was a skilled artilleryman and served on the staffs of Generals Rosecrans and Grant.

Advices from Hong Kong to July 15th state that the fire of discontent is still smouldering. In North China occasional riots are reported. Comparative quiet seems to have been restored in Yangtsze valley. Considerable property in the southern part of the province belonging to the Catholic missions has been destroyed.

Doctors and Alcohol.

HOW PHYSICIANS CAN HELP THE CAUSE OF TEMPERANCE.

[From a Paper by Dr. John D. Blackmer of Massachusetts.]

"In what way may a physician effectually help to stay the ravages of intemperance?" There are many specific ways of doing this which the limits of such a paper will not allow us to consider; we will briefly point out three general ones.

First: By practicing total abstinence himself. Not only is it true that every man's life tells upon some other life and the unconscious influence of what a man does or refrains from doing is often greater than the impression that he labors to make, but it is also true that the physician is exceptionally placed in his power to influence others in things pertaining to health and disease. He is supposed to know what is best for the physical system and he is supposed to act in accordance with that knowledge; hence, many feel safe in pursuing a course which they regard as questionable if they see the guardian of their health doing it. Still further, however deeply one may deplore the ravages of intemperance, and however earnestly he may desire to rescue its victims, he can really do very little effective work so long as the odor of the evil clings to his own person. The day has passed when one can labor effectually in the temperance cause with a perfumed breath. A thief may be able to catch a thief but he will not accomplish much toward reforming one while he is known to be a thief himself. An opium slave may detest the habit and earnestly desire to rescue those who are in the toils but he will have very little moral force in effecting the reform of others while it is understood that he is himself a victim. The life that is above reproach is the weighty one in any reform.

Second: He may help by talking, teaching, praying and voting with a view of destroying the great evil. It is sometimes said that talk is cheap and so it is when it means nothing, talk that is contradicted by practice and that is more than offset by going to the polls hand in hand with the distiller and the saloonist, shouting for the same candidates and voting the same ticket. Such talk is of little avail; but talk that is reinforced by an upright life and consistent acting and voting, is effective and is often irresistible. The physician is in a position where he can do much teaching that is quiet and convincing way will impress the heart and mould the life; in public and in private, in the social assembly, on the street and in the sick room there opens to him opportunities of service in this field which few other men enjoy.

Third: More than in any other way the physician can help stay the ravages of intemperance by a proper attitude toward intoxicants in the treatment of the sick and here it must be admitted by candid men there's abundant occasion for a great reform. When the craze for intoxicants have passed away and an impartial history of their use as a remedy shall be written, it will appear, as we believe, the most irrational and unscientific chapter upon the medical record, inasmuch as they have been and are employed in every form of disease, and for every conceivable purpose, and that too frequently without regularity of administration or precision of dose. They are prescribed when it is well-known that the most glaring and abominable adulterations are the rule and not the exception, so that neither the patient nor the physician has much idea of what the former is swallowing under the guise of whisky, brandy or gin. Yes! the indiscriminate use of these articles has become a by-word and a reproach of which the profession have reason to be profoundly ashamed. They are given to increase the temperature and to lower the temperature when it has been abundantly proved by experiment at home, and also in arctic regions and in torrid climes, that their use does not increase the power to resist cold or withstand heat. They are given to increase strength when it is well-known that they do not give volume or power to the physical system or any part thereof, and athletes fully understand that they must eschew them utterly if they would develope their highest powers. They are given again and again to raise up, when even the school boy knows that their general tendency is to run one down. Still if some of our medical brethren have not yet arrived at the point where they can utterly exclude intoxicants from their list of remedies, and we have much reason to believe that there are some such yet, in view of the fact that all these agents are prescribed because of the alcohol which they contain, and were this element excluded not one of them would be employed, we urge this class of physicians to use alcohol alone properly diluted and flavored if need be, and cast out forever, whiskey, brandy, gin, wine, "et id genus omne." This would prove a telling blow against the liquor interest and would not abridge or impair the power of even believers in alcoholics, in their warfare against disease. We earnestly solicit our alcoholic brethren to take this step and especially to study and investigate this subject in all its relation, feeling assured the more fully it is examined the sooner will dawn the day when the use of intoxicating liquors in the sick room will be utterly discarded as both unscientific and unwise.

A bridge to be built over the Harlem River at Seventh avenue, New York, will cost $1,250,000 and have the widest draw in the world. This will be 142 feet long, weigh 2400 tons and be operated by a 60-horse power engine.

A recent visitor to California tells a Chicago reporter that Mrs. Langtry's 5,000 acres of land on the Pacific slope have increased tenfold in value.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Ia.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and I have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

Literary News and Notes.

Dr. Holmes is said to be writing two memoirs, one being that of a great surgeon.

Miss Mary Proctor, daughter of the late Richard A. Proctor, has appeared in the newspaper field as a contributor of scientific articles, somewhat after the style of the ex-Astronomer Royal.

Prof. John Fiske will open the September Popular Science Monthly with a paper on The Doctrine of Evolution: its Scope and Influence, which can not fail to give the reader a better understanding of this great method than generally prevails.

Hamlin Garland, whose wonderful portrayal of Western farm life in his "Main-travelled Roads" has attracted such general attention, contributes a brilliant humorous Western character sketch in the September Arena, entitled "An Evening at the Corner Grocery."

A fifth paper, concerning Glass in Science, will be added in September to the fascinating illustrated series on Glass-making, by Prof. C. H. Henderson, in The Popular Science Monthly. It describes the making of spectacle-glasses, the grinding of lenses for telescopes, the blowing and graduating of thermometer-tubes, and the making of hydrometers, etc.

The September number of the Arena will contain a very timely paper in view of the great agitation now in progress at Chautauqua on the subject of woman's dress. This paper, which is entitled "Fashion's Slaves," is prepared by the editor and is profusely illustrated, containing exact reproductions of prevailing fashions in the sixties, seventies and eighties. It is understood that he is himself a victim. The life that is above reproach is the weighty one in any reform.

A Midsummer Madness, a novel by Ellen Olney Kirk, is published in the Seaside Paper Series of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. Price 50 cents. The London Spectator commended this novel very heartily, saying: "This book is most refreshing. The scene of the story is laid on the banks of the great river Delaware, and a delicious sense of open air, of trees and flowers, of the many-tinted lights of sunset, tinging the broad river and the sky above, pervades the book. . . . The story is, of course, the old, old story, but the interest never flags from the first page to the last."

The numbers of The Living Age for August 1st and 8th contain Prince Napoleon, Westminster; Influenza, by Sir Morrell Mackenzie, M. D., and Bulgars and Serbs, Fortnightly; The Locust Plague in Algeria, and Italy and France, Contemporary; The Gurkhas; a Fighting Race, New Review; Richard de la Pole, "White Rose." A Night in a Hay-Stack, and Ways and Whims of Fresh-Water Fishes, Blackwood; John Bright's School, Gentleman's; Monckton Milnes, Temple Bar; The King's Luck, Cornhill; A Publisher and His Friends, Leisure Hour; L. We'll write it down till everybody sees it
Till everybody is sick of seeing it
Till everybody knows it without seeing it—that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of chronic catarrh in the head, catarrhal headache, and "cold in the head." In perfect faith, its makers, the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., offers to pay $500 to any one suffering from chronic catarrh in the head whom they cannot cure.
Now if the conditions were reversed—if they asked you to pay $500 for a positive cure you might hesitate. Here are reputable men, with years of honorable dealing; thousands of dollars and a great name back them and they say—"We can cure you because we've cured thousands of others like you—if we can't we will pay you $500 for the knowledge that there's one whom we can't cure."
They believe in themselves. Isn't it worth a trial. Isn't any trial preferable to catarrh?

A Burglar Captured.
This morning about two o'clock, John Wood, the well known plumber who resides on Main Street, was awakened by hearing glass break. On getting out of bed he received a blow on the head. He immediately grappled with the burglar, and after a terrible struggle succeeded in holding him until his wife obtained help. On being searched at the station Mr. Wood's watch and wallet was found on his person. He gave the name of Robert Terry. The broken glass proved to be a bottle of Sulphur Bitters which had almost cured Mrs. Wood of rheumatism.—Exchange. 2w33
